

SLAVE STAMPEDE IN KENTUCKY.—
The Nashville Union of the 27th, says: "A very respectable slaveholder from Kentucky informs us that, within three weeks past, a change seems to have come over the negroes in the southern counties of that State, and large numbers of them are running off. He says that over one hundred and fifty have escaped from one county, and the trouble is increasing. In spite of the enormous prices which the great Kentucky staple—tobacco—bringing, slaves have depreciated greatly in value. A very large proportion of the slaveowners say, that slavery is hopelessly destroyed, and that they are willing to acquiesce in any disposition which may be made of the slaves. This sentiment is rapidly spreading among the people; the Union men are almost unanimously opposed to the factions and selfish course of the proslavery bigots at Louisville and Frankfort."
